Experiences of inclusion among older (40+) people with learning disabilities – register your interest

This is a study by the University of Dundee, Liverpool John Moores University, and the University of Hertfordshire.

We would like older people who have learning disabilities to help us.

We want to find out what life is like in their communities.

We would like you to tell us about your experiences of feeling included and welcome in your life.

We will give you a Samsung digital tablet to record your thoughts and feelings about feeling welcome or left out at places.

You will record these feelings by completing the questions on the digital tablet about 5 to 15 places you visit.

This will help us understand what inclusion and belonging mean to older people with learning disabilities.

We will use what you tell us to make suggestions to important people about making people with learning disabilities feel more included.

For more information, please see the Participant Information Sheet here.
