Inclusion for People with Learning Disabilities

This leaflet is about the National Development Team for Inclusion (NDTi), and the work we do with:

- People with learning disabilities
- Families
- People who buy services (commissioners)
- People who provide services
- Community members
- Others who are interested in better lives for people with learning disabilities

We believe that people with learning disabilities should have the same lives as everyone else.

We work to help make this happen.
Person centred support

We work with local areas to put person centred support in place.

We help people do planning, think about what services need to be in place and how people can be part of their community.

We help people use co-production. Co-production is a way of everyone thinking and working together.

This can include working together on what is good, how to spend money or changing services.
Housing, jobs and being part of the community

We help people with learning disabilities:

- have more choice and control in their own home
- take part in and help run community activities

We have found out the best ways to help people with learning disabilities get and keep jobs.

We can help people make this happen

We can help local areas think about day services and develop better things to do.
Good lives for people of all ages

We work with local services and people to think about how they can work together better so that people with learning disabilities get good lives from when they are born until they die.

People who challenge services

We work to improve the lives, services and supports for people with learning disabilities who challenge (who can hurt themselves or others).

We have a tool that can help commissioners improve local services.

We wrote the Green Light Toolkit 2013.

This helps mental health services make their services better for people with learning disabilities and people with autism.
Better health for people with learning disabilities

We work with Public Health England and Lancaster University on the Improving Health and Lives Learning Disability Observatory (IHaL).

IHaL works to get better information about the health of people with learning disabilities.

We help people think about what this means for services, so that people with learning disabilities have better health.
